

Rejection of 'Z' Ends Debate, Sponsor Says

Last Tuesday's rejection of the Charter Amendment "Z," the controversial measure which would have given the city council the right to elect the mayor of Torrance, has ended the matter, according to the sponsor of the ballot measure.

Councilman David K. Lyman, who spearheaded the attempt to oust Mayor Albert Ison by changing the city's charter, said he "placed the matter on the ballot so the people of Torrance could decide what type of leading representative they wished and what type of public conduct was acceptable to them."

"The public has decided," Lyman said, "and I will have nothing further to say regarding the subject."

The measure was rejected by a 2-to-1 majority as voters turned out in record numbers Tuesday.
